“ My grandpa was the best in the world he would always say when I came in his house “well hey granddaughter” I loved him so much he always had something funny to say or had a show to talk about to my mom or a new recipe that he wanted to try. Doesn't seem real that he's gone i miss him very much Rest In Peace grandpa I love you and miss you like crazy

“ I don't think this site has room for everything I could post about my friend Danny, we started in the car business at Little Rock Dodge together in the summer of 1980, we both became managers after 3 months of selling and the competitiveness came out in both of us. One day we were standing on the showroom talking and getting to know one another and I said that I had 3 kids, he said me too, I told him the ages of mine and he said that's the ages of mine too. So we decided it was time to get our families together and it started 30 years of friendship like a person only has a few chances to start in a lifetime. It was a plus that our wives became good friends.

We became inseparable for the next 12 years, we played golf every Sunday morning, even in the sleet and snow. We were both Razorback basketball nuts, I even had a room painted red where we watched and recorded all the games.

Three quick stories because if I got started I could go all night and never run out of the fun and neat things we did. The owner of LR Dodge gave us two tickets to the Razorback game in Pine Bluff, this was not just any game we were going to watch our Razorbacks play No.1 North Carolina and they were undefeated and we came into the game which was on a Sunday and we had just played a hard game the day before and nobody in the sporting world gave us a chance even though we were ranked no. 6 in the nation, our seats was 10 rows up behind the backboard and guess what....thanks to Charles Balentine's last second shot we defeated an undefeated team. Danny and I celebrated all the way home.

Danny had traded for a Lincoln one Saturday and he drove it home, we went to a golf course and told the owner that we were moving here and looking for a club to join. We talked them into putting us a cart out so we could tee off at 6 am and when we finished playing they did not charge us a dime for anything.

Like I said we did a lot of crazy things and we never got upset with each other ever. Danny was a good friend, the type you would want in your corner in case of trouble, I am very sorry to say that we lose touch with one another over the past 20 years and I regret that very much. I can honestly say that Danny Johnson was a good friend, husband, father and I know that he had to be the best Grand father ever. He will be missed and I will keep his family in my prayers. Rest well my friend rest well.
