“ Edith was a precious friend. During the sixteen years she was our neighbor on Mohawk Drive, we enjoyed many moments together. She would get in her electric scooter and come across the street to enjoy our irises, or she would send Bill to meet me halfway to exchange cookies or jello. She loved to share pictures and books, and he loved to share his most recent craft. Bill was always willing to help us with whatever problem we had, and they both enjoyed the irises I shared with them. And when they moved to Harding Place, they shared some of their bulbs from their mailbox planting, so that we can remember them every year. Edith and Bill truly enjoyed this life of adventure they shared, and they gave us all the perfect example of keeping on when life gets hard. We still miss them being across the street, but we are happy to know they are enjoying a blessed rebirth now with no pain.
