“ My father was a quiet, gentle man. His first concern was for his children and grandchildren then his neighbors & friends. He would give to a stranger in need. He gave me many things in my lifetime but what I cherish most was the time I spent with him in his last days on earth. I learned humility from his kindness to the ones that cared for him. He was grateful to his nurses & aids, to his family and friends. I admired his courage and his will to live, but the thing I admired most was his concern for us. His love was so great that he apologized to us for having to care for him. I was privileged to care for my Dad. Every hour I spent with him, each memory he shared with be with me the rest of my life.

Goodbye Dad, I love you & miss you so much. I promise you we will be together again as a family again someday.
