“ I didn't know until now; tears are flowing. Doyle and Betty befriended me when most people would not. Doyle and Betty provided me a job when others shut the door. Betty called me numerous times to tell me she was preparing fresh vegetables for dinner; I would drop everything and rush over! We have tried to visit with them every spring when traveling to Arkansas. This spring our trip was shortened because of major weather issues and we did not make it to Bald Knob. My heart is broken; thank you for permission to express the shock of this loss.

“ We share your grief at the loss of Betty. She and Doyle hosted friends in their home to watch ballgames, visit, and of course all the food you could eat. Betty was a gracious hostess, worked in the community, and most of all she was our friend. The hardest part of getting older is losing those you have loved for so many years.

An unassuming quiet was her way... while underneath a strength so fierce and love so loyal rejection was rejected. A lightness, embrace of light and life, a joyful lack of shame or should-have's secretly assigned to strangers... All were welcome... welcomed... what wonderful woman... we were blessed
