“ So sorry to hear of the death of Mr. Epps. Fine gentlemen! Willing to go out of his way to help. My great-great grandfather is buried on Mr. Epps' property, in a very old family cemetery (probably dating back to the 1840's), overgrown with trees and brush, deep in thickets of cruel thorns. In an effort to show me just where my folks were buried, Mr. Epps braved the "wilderness" and walked into the woods. I wasn't very far away, taking a more circuitous route, trying to be extra careful and not get shredded by the briars, since my legs were only protected by a long skirt. Though he was better covered by jeans and work boots, Mr. Epps was soon entrapped by the thorn-bushes and could not free himself, without cutting his ankles pretty badly. I managed to get to him and release him from their grip, for which he seemed to be very, very grateful. He had been nice to me before. Now, he gave me a tour of the old Spencer house and told me a lot about it, from what he knew. He said I could come there whenever I liked. Special memory! Special man! My sympathies go to all the family.
