Mark & Monica, I can't find the words to express my feelings, Darrell & I too lost our son in 1992. But I would never say I know how you feel because everyone deal with loss differently. However, please call on me if you need a moms shoulder to lean on. Our Gods the one who will give you the most comfort.

I am so sorry to learn of the passing of this young man. Your son will always be with you in your heart, and I know that the days/weeks ahead will be so very difficult. We will be praying for each of you as you say goodbye this side of heaven to your son.

Mark, Monica and Amy and the rest of your family that I haven't met. Shocked is what I felt when Cindy told me of the accident. Our lives haven't crossed since Yarnells and the times our children had events at Searcy High. I remember having met Mark at some function, probably something Amy was doing at school but this was years ago. Like others I've lived in my own little world with Cindy and my children and grand children and figured every one else was doing the same, until something like this happens and reality slams us back to earth and we wish for a way to fix and heal the hurt. I know your family is deeply religious and you have that to lean on in this difficult time. If you need a shoulder to lean on or someone to listen, I'm available all the time.

Andrew was in our daughter and son-in-law's wedding -- Carissa and Cole. Andrew was always so very polite. He spoke to old people and strangers with respect as if he was interested in them, and I think he was. Mark and Monica, you raised a good young man. We always wonder, "why?". Isaiah 57:1,2, has been a comfort at that question for me. Love and prayers for the family, and all his dear friends who miss him terribly.
