“ Yesterday was a hard day for everyone. We miss you so much. I can't even find the words that I want to say. I'll always regret not spending enough time with you. But I will always cherish those childhood memories. Your house was the place for all of us grandkids and many more. I won't forget your delicious cakes they were the best and will forever be the best. Wish I could have one more hug just one. It all feels like a night mare hoping you will walk through that door one more time. Why does time have to be so selfish??? I miss and love you grandma. You will forever be in my heart ❤️💙💜 . Til we meet again.

“ I created this in Nov, 2020 for mom.

*Trying to find my words, when unspoken pain is heard in a cough that will not let you breathe
And I see you, being brave given the chance, no doubt, you'd save the rest of us from the fear you can see*

So I try to honor this ignoring the rattle and the hiss that marks your words now when you speak But then we say goodbye and I struggle not to cry as grief, and guilt and fear leave me weak.

*So I try to just be still And I say, "It is God's Will" but the curse behind my eyes replays my crimes:
At times but three or four miles lay between our doors but my visits only came at needful times*

*I failed to stop and see if there was anything that we might talk about or perhaps to "think it through"
Like all those years ago in the town of Gotebo with Star Trek, a Hairbrush,*

me and you.

I'm sorry that I have it seems for granted, taken many things and lost so many moments we might have shared

I'm sorry that I have not tried to spend more time by your side the excuses make one think I hadn't cared

I'm sorry when, in my books I see a thousand spent hours easily assuming always you too would be on a shelf

I'm sorry you are in such pain while helplessly I stand in vain childishly wishing I could take it upon myself.

I'm trying to find the words I don't want to say and trying to find the courage to face a coming day.

Every time we say "goodbye" and "talk to you later" then I realize I may have lied so I fight back tears again

I love you mom.

“ *Martha,
Little did I know that the day I met Marty was the day that I met true GOLD. I saw a glow about her that made me smile and want to be her friend, and that I was. I can't say just one or two things about Marty that made her such a special: Daughter, Sister, Woman, Wife, Mother and Grandmother! Marty it was an honor to call you my FRIEND.*

Gary, Jeffery, and all family, you are in my prayers...

“ Marty was a beautiful person. Not only my cousin, but my friend. She taught me cake decorating, but more importantly she is largely responsible for my love and compassion for others. Until I see you again, I'll miss your beautiful smile and your words of encouragement and wisdom. God bless you, my dear sweet spirit
