“ For Shirley,

*Though they said when you were born, that you would not survive
You had a family to surround you, determined to keep you alive
They said when you got hit by a car, you would never be normal
Your family coached your little brain, and creative juices followed We would dress in mother's night gowns, pretending to be fairies or queens*

We'd get into Mom's jewelry for treasures and such things Though you preferred to be the prince, the mop was your trusted steed

You didn't care for dresses or frilly things

We played with Ken and Barbie until you invented surfboarding and broke the windshield on their car

*You had such a giving heart, even though I made you cry,
When I cracked open a can of biscuits and you thought the Pillsbury Doughboy died.*

You thought our fish were lonely, so to give them company, you put the turtles and tadpoles in their tank and cringed when they all began to feed

You tried to save the fish dad caught one day, by putting them back in the lake,

super was rather lacking that night, if we ever ate

How many birds did we try to save by bringing home their nest and poor Dad would stay up all night to feed them, he did his very best

You lived to raise three great kids, and almost graduated from college

You far exceeded normal yet remained down to earth and solid

When I think of my tomboy sister and the woman you became

Your strength of perseverance and the obstacles you overcame

I'll always miss you in my heart, and though part of me is gone

Lets just say I'll see ya until my time has comes

Your sister Cheryl.
